

Reasons Your Child Needs Regular Dental Check-ups

Have you scheduled your child's 6 month appointment? At Kool Smiles we care for your child with friendly staff and...

1. Find little cavities before they get big

Catching cavities early on, while they are still small and easy to treat, saves you time and money, and saves your kids a whole lot of pain. Untreated cavities can grow and spread to other nearby teeth. If left alone, they can even turn into painful infections that lead to root canals. Ouch!

2. Fight cavities with a dental cleaning

When you go in for your twice-yearly dental check up, you should also get a cleaning. Cleanings are like a power wash for your teeth that scrub away hard tartar buildup that you can't get rid of with brushing. When your teeth are super smooth and clean, it's hard for cavity-causing bacteria to "stick around."

3. Make sure adult teeth are coming in properly

Baby teeth act as placeholders for adult teeth, helping them to grow in straight. When they fall out too early, or if adult teeth come in too soon, you can end up with a crooked, crowded smile. Catching and treating these sorts of problems early can make all the difference in the world.

4. Prevention is the best medicine

There is an old saying that goes like this: "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." Regular dental checkups aren't just for fixing problems. They also play a big role in stopping dental problems before they start.

5. Teach them how to care for their teeth

When kids visit the dentist, they don't just get an exam and cleaning—they get an education. Dentists can be wonderful teachers, showing your child how to brush and floss properly, and answering any questions they might have. Dentists are great at getting kids excited about oral health, and helping them see how important oral health is for all of us!
